BERMUDA GRASS.—This valuable great worth. Randall, in his "Sheep Husbandry of the South," and Mr. Afflect, of Mississippi, one of our highest authorities upon grasses, puts Bermuda down as most valuable for many purposes.

One of its greatest qualities is that it will grow upon barren and worn out ground. grow upon barren and worn out ground, horses, cattle and sheep, and soon restoring these otherwise worthless lands to more than native fertility. It requires no cultivation, all the labor required to secure it being over with when the grass is once planted. No better pasture grass can be found. Bermuda is the very best grass to protect railway embankments, the roots making a perfect "mat" in the ground and preventing washes. The bare hillsides all over the State should be covered with Bermuda. Of all the people in the world, we most need grass, and none should be neglected that is valuable -Spirit of Arkansas.
